Naturopathic Physician (NMD) Licensing: Year in Review

Idaho now licenses 46 NMDs who are providing naturopathic primary care throughout Idaho. The Naturopathic Medical Board continues to work with the Board of Medicine and IDOPL to ensure the public's safety.

IDOPL and the Naturopathic Medical Board:

“The Idaho State Board of Medicine has been licensing Naturopathic Medical Doctors (NMDs) since 2019. Since July 1, 2021, the Board has received twenty-six (26) applications and has issued twenty-two (22) licenses. The Board and its staff continue to work diligently in the licensure and regulation of NMDs in Idaho. Since July 1, 2021, there has been no disciplinary action taken on an NMD license.”

-Stephanie Lottridge, IDOPL, NMB

Membership Committee:

Now that the state of Idaho has granted NMDs licensure, the IDAANP can expand our focus beyond legislative work and develop member benefits that will help support our members as they set up practices and network with the medical community. The IDAANP Membership Committee has been hard at work creating relationships with qualified Continuing Medical Education providers so our doctors can maintain and build on their knowledge and care they provide to patients.

The IDAANP strives to increase the standards of safe naturopathic primary care in Idaho. We continue to make efforts to get NMDs recognized as part of the larger medical system, specifically in hospitals, private and public insurance, and specialty care clinics. The IDAANP will continue working to see licensing grow and that NMDs are considered to be an integral part of the Idaho health care system.
